

JCI Range Today 6,250 – 6,150 (Support), 6,300 – 6,386 (Resistance)

Jakarta Composite Index edged up slightly by 0.13% or 8.2 points to 6,262.22, still holding above the crucial support level of the 10-day moving average (MA10) at 6,250. This maintains the potential for a short-term bullish wave toward the next target: the 20-day moving average (MA20) at 6,386—up to the 6,400 level, which serves as a medium-term resistance. However, if a pullback occurs, keep an eye on the potential gap-closing move around the 6,100 level, which would act as the next support. Volatility is expected to remain high in the coming weeks due to ongoing uncertainty surrounding U.S. tariffs. Investors and traders are Advised to engage in quick trades and apply disciplined cut-loss (CL) levels.
